

GERALYN A. SOLIDUM

Head, Public Sector Relationship Management

Big corporations aren't the only drivers of economic growth; the National Government, with its various departments, bureaus and institutions, is an entity with many complex needs. It's the kind of challenging account that Ger Solidum can appreciate, having served in government before.

Prior to Meralco, Ger worked with the Department of Transportation and Communications (DOTC), where she managed several construction projects in Regions VI (Kalibo, Iloilo, and Bacolod), VII (Dumaguete, Cebu, Bohol, Siquijor) and X (Cagayan de Oro). In 1990, she was part of a tour sponsored by the Japan International Cooperation Agency to study Japan's airport systems in Kansai, Tokyo, Osaka and Nagasaki.

Today, Ger oversees Meralco's vital relationships with a wide spectrum of government agencies, covering the key Departments, government-owned and controlled corporations (GOCCs), military and police camps, government hospitals, state universities and colleges (SUCs) and other such institutions within the Meralco franchise area.

She and her team are constantly on hand to provide assistance and advice on a range of issues, whether it be helping an agency manage its energy use more efficiently, enhancing a bureau's electrical systems, or improving power quality to minimize downtime.

Ger also manages the various relocation requests from national government to pave the way for its major infrastructure projects, including big ticket Public-Private-Partnership (PPP) projects, such as the NAIA Expressway, LRT-1 Cavite Extension, SLEX-NLEX Connector Link, among many others in the government pipeline.

Ger holds a bachelor's degree in civil engineering from the University of Santo Tomas. Her work exposure covers a full range of Meralco functions, given her extensive experience in construction contracts management, distribution management systems, and personalized customer service.
